PREFATORY NOTE

THIS list does not profess to include all the classes of publications that fall within the province of comprehensive local bibliographies. It has no place for books or articles whose claim would rest, not on their subject, but either

i. on their being written by local authors; or
ii. on their being printed by local printers.

Thus it will be found to contain James Suter's "Memorabilia of Inverness," but not his "Ordinance of Levites"; Young and Imray's "Northern Supplement to the British Almanack for 1802," but not "The Scotch Minister's Assistant," printed in that year by the same firm.

With few exceptions, the books noted may be consulted in the Aberdeen University Library.

This Inverness-shire list forms one of a group which was begun by Mr. Kellas Johnstone's "Concise Bibliography of the shires of Aberdeen, Banff, and Kincardine"; and which it is hoped will be continued by similar lists for Moray and Nairn; for Ross, Cromarty, Sutherland, and Caithness; and for Orkney and Shetland. The counties named, from Kincardine to Shetland, constitute the district attached by statutory enactment (24 and 25 Vict. Cap. 107) to the University of Aberdeen.

As will be seen from the Table of Contents, an attempt has been made to arrange the titled items in certain groups—such as those relating to each of the individual parishes comprised within the County of Inverness; to each of the older districts (Badenoch, Lochaber, etc.), whose boundaries are not coincident with parish boundaries; to the County as a whole; and to the Highlands generally, of which Inverness is the natural centre. Under "Inverness-shire" are placed items whose scope does not extend beyond the County, or items which, with a wider scope, have definite parts (chapters or sections) explicitly dealing with the County. Under "Highlands" are placed items which contain matter important for the student of Inverness-shire history, archæology, institutions, topography, or natural science, but not easily separable from the general text.

It will be readily understood by anyone who has attempted such a classification, that the proper placing of an item is often a matter of difficulty and doubt, and the compiler asks indulgence for apparent omissions, which the Index (of over 3000 headings) will show to be merely transpositions (more or less defensible) from one Section to another.

Certain topics, especially those admitting diversity of view, have already won for themselves the distinction of special Bibliographies; and such topics the present compiler does not attempt to exhaust. Two notable examples are the Forty-Five and the Ossianic Controversy. The compiler contents himself with selecting a few representative items dealing with the relation of Prince Charles to Inverness-shire, and of James MacPherson to his native parish of Kingussie. Other topics, such as St. Kilda and the Parallel Roads of Lochaber, have been treated with comparative fullness.

Clan histories are, for convenience, placed with the parishes where the seats of the Chiefs are located—Mackintoshes in Moy, Camerons in Kilmalie, etc.

In respect of form, the included items may be:—

i. Books or pamphlets, titled with heading and imprint in the usual fashion.

ii. Articles in Magazines or Transactions of Learned Societies, cited with reference to the volume, the pages, and the date, not of the completed volume, but of the number in which the article appeared or of the meeting at which it was read.

iii. Analytical entries from books of a non-serial character, which may or may not appear independently in the Bibliography—also with reference to volume and page.

Among the more important works, serial or otherwise, which have been subjected to a fairly exhaustive analysis are the following:—

Acts of the Scots Parliament.
Acts of the British Parliament.
Anderson's Communion tokens.
Annals of Scottish Natural History.
Botanical Society of Edinburgh: Transactions.

Geological Society of Edinburgh: Transactions.
Geological Society of Glasgow: Transactions.

Shaw's History of the Province of Moray.
Society of Antiquaries of Scotland: Transactions (Archæologia Scotica) and Proceedings.
Statistical Account of Scotland, 1791-99.
Wernerian Society: Memoirs.

The compiler will welcome a note of items which have eluded his search or have been inaccurately titled. He is indebted for valuable help to several Inverness friends: Mr. James Barron, Mr. D. S. Chisholm, Mr. James Fraser, Mr. Alexander MacDonald, Mr. Kenneth MacDonald, Dr. William Mackay, Dr. Alexander Ross, and Mr. Thomas Wallace. He also gratefully acknowledges information supplied by Dr. W. B. Blaikie, Mr. J. M. Bulloch, Mr. C. G. Cash, Mr. J. F. Kellas Johnstone, Miss J. E. Kennedy, Mr. R. Murdoch Lawrance, Rev. Stephen Ree, and Professor J. W. H. Trail. The Bibliography would have lacked much of any value it may possess but for the assistance given by Miss M. S. Best, Sub-Librarian, who read the proofs, and made many suggestions, all tending to secure consistency of treatment and general accuracy.

CROMDALE and INVERALLAN.

By the Act 33 and 34 Vict. cap. 16 (1870), certain portions of the parish of Cromdale were assigned to Inverness-shire, and certain portions to Morayshire. Grantown thus passed from Inverness-shire to Morayshire. By Order in Council, 12 January, 1891, the parish was held to be wholly in Morayshire, the part in Inverness-shire being transferred to the parish of Duthil.

CROY and DALCROSS.

The Boundary Commissioners under the Local Government (Scotland) Act issued 19th January, 1891, a Provisional Order placing the whole of the parish of Croy in the county of Nairn; but the Order was amended by the Act 54 and 55 Vict. Cap. cliv (1891), which apportioned the parish between the counties of Nairn and Inverness, and assigned a detached portion lying in the county of Inverness to the parish of Inverness. One effect of the changes has been to place in Inverness-shire, instead of Nairnshire, the Clava circles and the Culloden battlefield. (See Shennan's "Boundaries of Counties and Parishes in Scotland," 1892, pp. 144-145.)
